1. Controls at the Czech-Polish frontier at Zebrzydowice (Q50/079) have recently become more thorough. Originally, Polish army personnel only checked passports, leaving the baggage inspection to customs officials. Now army officers also assist at the customs control.

2. The new Polish identity documents (Dowod Osobisty) had not been distributed to the population as of the end of May 1952. All citizens were ordered to hand in their old documents to the Party block or street wardens. It is believed that the new documents will differ in appearance from district to district.

3. Military rail transports bound for the west have been observed passing through Kutno. Cannons and other implements of war are no longer covered with tarpaulins or otherwise hidden from view, but are transported openly.
